F                      Faug6                      Dm/F                      F7

They might put you to sleep but they can't take your dreams.

A#                      F

You will be awoken, a new day for you.

They may lock you away and bury your words

But they will be spoken, you cannot hide truth.

Am                      Em/G                      Dm/F                      F

They will strangle ideas that do not suit them.

Am                      Em/G                      Dm/F

They will deny that you even exist.

They reign supreme over all who oppose them,

Replacing names with an asterisk.

In a fortress of thorns or a dungeon of stone,

They hope you are broken but that will not be.

The tide always turns and time always flows,

You will be awoken and we will be free.

We will weave your ideas all around them.

We will sow new seeds throughout the land.

Justice and peace will overthrow them.

Cometh the hour and cometh the man.
