I was the contract man - no uncertain terms.

She was a chaos girl, the kind that never learns.

I was a businessman, working 9 to 5.

She was a drifter trying hard to find a life.

My whole world was spinning, she derailed me all the time.

She said,

“You can be my anchorman and I might settle down.”

I said, “It will never work, I’ll be seeing you around.”

So I became a weightless man, floating in empty space.

She remained the mystery that was written in her face.

Love can make a fool of man, but I simply had to fall

Into the arms of Uncertainty and let chaos take its toll.

Ooooo, when Uncertainty got between the lines,

My whole world was spinning,

She derailed me all the time.
